A word from Steve

In just 1 week over 75 million people have watched the video about Joseph Kony, the rebel leader of Gods Army in Uganda. Most of these are youth from all around the world. In fact the push to lead Kony to justice is being driven by the worlds youth. This is an amazing sign of hope for our world. Given the opportunity and vision, people are keen to make a difference. It leaves me with the question, Jesus message of love, justice, peace, and connection to each other growing out of a relationship with God, should be the most powerful message in the world, yet it is uncool to follow Jesus. Why, what has happened that this radical and courageous message is so confused with: properness, boringness and naive dependence for weak people. What can we do, no, what must we do, to connect better with our world? What do you think?
